Murderer Pulliam Escapes From the Asylum—Bitten by a Mad Dog—Census This Year—Work Begun—Republican Convention May 29.

PULLIAM ESCAPES AGAIN.

The Hawesville Crazy Murderer Once More at Large.

Ed Pulliam, the Hancock county lunatic, escaped from the Western Asylum Wednesday afternoon for the third time. It will be remembered that Pulliam was returned to the Asylum about three weeks ago, having shot and killed Rev. W. B. Swope a short time before. He had been at large for sixteen months. He was again sent back and has made several attempts to escape during the last few weeks. Wednesday afternoon while walking in the yard with other patients taking exercise, in charge of the attendants, he suddenly made a break for liberty and escaped from the premises and disappeared. He is still at large and it is not known where he is. Dr. Stone has men out looking for him and will leave nothing undone to capture him before he leaves the county.

A Census This Year.

City Assessor R. M. Hurt will begin his regular assessment on the first of April, and under the terms of the charter for the fourth class cities will be required to take a complete census of the city's population. Five years ago when the government census was taken, Hopkinsville was given 5,838 inhabitants. This is the first opportunity that has been afforded to correct the imperfect census of 1890 and the people will await with considerable interest the completion of Mr. Hurt's work. Hopkinsville will be found to have not less than 7,500 people.

Blew Down the Trestle.

What is known as "number six" trestle on what was formerly the L. & T. railroad near Glen Ellen, was blown over and fell with a crash during the hard wind on Sunday night. It was nearly two hundred yards long and about seventy feet high and will be remembered by those who traveled over the old narrow gauge before the road was made a standard gauge and the route changed via Princeton Junction.

Bitten by a Mad Dog.

A few days ago Mr. Leuville Hunter, of White Plains, was bitten by a dog, which acted in a manner that indicated hydrophobia. Hunter, for fear that the animal was afflicted with rabies, has gone on a search for a mad stone.

Burglars at Dawson.

A few nights ago the Arcadia hotel at Dawson was entered by thieves and about a hundred dollars worth of jewelry was taken off. They left no clue and their capture is hardly among the probabilities.

Ah! There, Governor Clay.

PARIS, Ky., March 5.—The wife of Cassius M. Clay, Jr., candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, presented him yesterday with a bouncing baby boy. It will be named Cassius M. Jr.

Struck Sulphur Water.

A fine stream of sulphur water was struck in the yard of Mr. J. J. Smith, near Gracey, Wednesday, at a depth of 45 feet. The stream is a very full one, and the water strongly impregnated with sulphur.

Republican Convention.

The Bradley forces have won and the Republicans will have an early convention. It will be at Louisville, May 29, a month earlier than the Democratic convention.

Work Has Begun.

Mr. Jesse W. Starr, who has the waterworks contract, started to work yesterday with 25 or 30 hands.

A Bloodsucking Earthworm.

South Africa is the home of a species of earthworm, a creature closely related to our common angleworm, which is not only a giant among the denizens of the soil, but which is reputed to have a taste for human blood. There are two species of this uncanny wiggler, one of a dark red color and the other almost black. They are larger than one's finger, and from three to four feet in length.

REPORTS of the favorable results of the anti-toxine treatment continue to come in. In Trieste the death rate in cases of diphtheria has fallen from fifty to eighteen per cent. In Bukovina from sixty-three to sixteen per cent.

In Northport Town the sun goes down behind the hills, then all is still. Within the peaceful village, where a benison is in the air. A pilgrim host of crickets yield. An angelus from every hill. And there the moon looks kindly down in mellow beams on Northport Town.

GOOD ROADS TALK.

Another Article from Jo on the Subject of Free Turnpikes.

EDITOR KENTUCKIAN: I see you head the article against free turnpikes from "Supervisor" as jumping on "J." Well, I have expected to be jumped on. No great enterprise has ever succeeded without argument pro and con. My idea was to get the matter before the people and try to evolve some plan for roads, better than the system now in vogue.

Our correspondent in opposition has an erroneous idea that we are trying to get the county court to buy up the pikes in the southern part and tax the other sections to pay for them and still leave them in the mud. By no means; I am only in favor of a fair and equitable arrangement—giving no preferences, and placing the money where it will do the most good to the many, and to buy no roads already built until the court can see their way clear to do so. In fact I favor of an equitable way of doing only as they are now doing in upper counties. My understanding is that by mass meetings of the citizens they determine to avail themselves of the recent enactments, and so petitioned their several courts. All were taken at once.

Now, six of our main roads are piked, five or six more, and those mainly in the northern part of the county, would be all that are necessary to open the main avenues of trade and travel. I think it decidedly necessary and fair to pike several of those roads leading to the coal fields, which means cheaper coal than the railroads are now delivering. It would certainly be unfair to tax those having no pikes to buy up those already existing. And it would be unjust and illegal to pike parallel roads to those piked by private subscription. The court gave them the roads to improve, and they must protect them. Superior writes of 900 miles of road in the county. Of course, it will now be contemplated to pike all—and it is entirely unnecessary as he knows. I stick to my original proposition, that five or six more in the new roads north and east of them already built will open the main avenues, sufficient for a long time to come.

Supervisor does me and himself in justice when he thinks I have intended or made any reflections on the present magistrates. They have done remarkably well. They have spent more money in the county than any other county in the State, and unless they change the system will continue to spend. They have done all the good 'squires could do, and all the people would stand, and still they have miserable roads and the people complain. It was the system and not the court that was the cause of the road and extravagance. Now, I will call Supervisor to time on one statement that he will find untrue if he will call up the secretary of any of the pikes. They can and will show him that our pikes are a paying investment, and will average the dividends. I claim from 8 to 12 per cent. He will also find that I do not buy a share of stock at par. So his innuendo that it is a selfish idea of turnpike stockholders wanting to unload is not true goods. I would like for him to inform himself on this idea.

I was not authorized by a single stockholder to say that they would ever part with their property at any figure. Only spoke for myself, and some hopes that the deal might sometime be affected for the general good. My stock pays me well, would rather have it than any bank stock.

I am satisfied that if the county ever gets them they will have to pay value for them. I spoke of hauling and paying toll on my wheat to merrily show that if I did not live on a turnpike I would not have 2,000 bushels to sell. Supervisor is right about taking out of one pocket and putting in the other, if it were otherwise I could not afford it. However, there are so few on the pikes that can do that—bear the burden. I pleaded guilty to driving and selling good horses, and wish Supervisor could do so. He comes to town by rail and pays his toll to the L. & N., another corporation. I know I never saw him on any other way in summer and in winter. He cannot. I know about where Supervisor lives, and I must say that if there ever was a country in need of improvement his is it. It is the most susceptible to rapid improvement than any section I know of by good roadways. Do something to invite immigration; something to attract more than roads. With snowy turnpikes and a country already picturesque, and the hills blooming with vineyard gardens etc. to be seen from the passing cars, to invite the home seeker. I see no reason why you should not come out of the route.

One point in answer to Supervisor and I am done. He says "how are we to keep these free pikes in repair?" We already pay two supervisors good salaries to see to it. How well they do it I don't know. Have no complaints to make on that score, as I live on a pike, and we keep it up without any cost to the county.

MATRIMONIAL.

PUTTY—WEST—Mr. James Putty, a widower about 70 years old, was married Sunday evening at Kirkmansville to Mrs. Hester West, formerly the late Frank West's. The bride is about 7 years the junior of her present husband. They were united by Eld. T. Adams, of the Christian Church, in the presence of a large number of friends and neighbors. The attendants were Mr. James Stamps and Miss F. A. Hale. Mr. Stamps is himself a widower for the second time. One of his wives was Mr. Putty's daughter and the other Mrs. West's daughter, so that he bore the relationship of son-in-law to each of the parties he waited upon. Mr. Putty lives in this county, six miles from town.

MCKINNEY-BAROS—Mr. Taylor McKinney and Miss Elvira Baile Bridges were married some days ago at the residence of Mr. Gus Robinson near Fruit Hill. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Ford of the Christian Church. After the ceremony the bride and groom partook of a wedding dinner at Mr. Robinson's and then left for their home in Kirkmansville.

New Millinery Store.

Mr. T. J. Sarzadas, of Louisville has opened up a new stock of millinery and fancy notions in the Hotel Latham block and will have his formal spring opening next Thursday March 14. Mr. Sarzadas is a brother-in-law of Mr. Walter Blythe, formerly of this city, and is a young business man who brings the best of recommendations. His stock is all new and seasonable and selected with great care and taste. He extends an invitation to all who want goods in his line to attend his opening and inspect his stock before making their spring selections. His stand is the first door on the silver bulletin in the entrance of Hotel Latham, on Virginia street.

A prominent United States senator, in lately speaking to a correspondent, about the currency bill, said: "I am convinced that it would be necessary, in order to secure the votes of silver representatives and senators, to make some concessions to them, and for that reason I would favor the insertion of a provision in the bill calling for the coinage of the silver bullion into treasury. There are about 128,000,000 ounces of silver which, if coined, would amount about $178,000,000. This would be a large sum of silver to throw upon the country, but I have not the slightest doubt that the country would absorb it without injurious results to the treasury."

The output of the mines of Colorado in gold, silver, lead and copper shows an aggregate of $13,922,000. The increase in gold over 1891 is $3,237,537, the product for the year being $12,734,008. This is the largest gold output in any single year in the history of the state. The silver product—$10,787,974—is the lowest ever recorded since the Leadville mines were discovered.

CLUBS IN WASHINGTON.
Some Are Famous in All Parts of the Country.

The Metropolitan Still Holds First Place, Although Crowded Closely by the Cosmos-Social Organizations of Newspaper Men.

(Special Washington Letter.)
Married men should spend their time with the wives and families and the work of every day is done. Every body will assent to this proposition, particularly the wives. But city life nearly all men are becoming club men. This is particularly true concerning life in this city. There can be no doubt that club life in Washington is on the increase. The rapid growth of the city within the past few years and the concentration of wealth and fashion have materially changed the outward characteristics of the city. Its social life aside from that growing out of official position has kept pace with the growth of the city in a business way. Ten years ago the only gentlemen's club of any note was the famous Metropolitan, numbering among its members some of the most distinguished men in social, political, official and military life throughout the United States. Within the next few years, however, clubs innumerable have come into existence, with memberships limited only to the capacity of the club houses. Gentlemen take their suppers at the club, instead of going home. They find it so handy to remain downtown, and after supper at the club, they are so near the theaters, and all other places of amusement, that the idea of going home to supper seems actually preposterous. It never occurs to them their home-coming would be an event of joy and gladness to a woman who has worked and planned all day for their comfort and happiness. They never dream that by their neglect they may be driving a soul to desperation, and, possibly, to evil inclinations in this world of temptation. The man who ignores their wives do not realize that other men may desire and seek the women whom they snub.

It is probable all right for bachelors to gather together in congenial societies of companionship. That is to be expected. That sentiment of comradeship is at the basis of all such organizations. So rapidly is Washington becoming the center of literary, scientific and educational life, that a club seemed absolutely necessary where congenial spirits could meet for conversation on topics other than those of fashion and the idle gossip of the hour. Out of this condition sprang the Cosmos club, whose list of members to-day includes the names of men famous world over as artists, authors and statesmen. The Metropolitan club still holds its own as the resort of the fashion of the capital, and the Cosmos is fast making a reputation as the home of the intellectual. Lights who are rapidly gathering for permanent residence at the capital. It is a permanent club institution and has none of the features which are objectionable to such aggregations of social masculinity in this great and wonderful city, which is even now growing into real rivalry with the capitals of the old world in beauty and grandeur of architectural development.

One of the oldest and best clubs in Washington is the Gridiron club. It is the only organization here which is composed exclusively of newspaper men and all of its members are gentlemen of distinction. No small men, no obscure men, can obtain membership in the Gridiron club. Every man in it has won his way in the world and reached or approximated the topmost round in the profession of journalism. Its membership is limited to forty; and, therefore, there are good men, able men and prominent men in journalism who have never attained membership in the Gridiron club. Vacancies occur occasionally by death, or the removal of members to some other city; and then only the best of the good men here are selected to take their places. One good feature, it may even be called the best feature, of the Gridiron club is the fact that it maintains no clubhouse where members might be attracted away from their homes. On the contrary, the club meets once or twice every month, in the office of some leading Washington correspondent, transacts business and adjourns. During the sessions of the congress occasional banquets are given by the Gridiron club, and men of mark in the congressional world are very glad to be honored with invitations to participate as guests of these leading literary lights. Presidents of the United States, members of the cabinet, senators, representatives, ministers and orators have been honored guests at Gridiron club banquets. The members crack many jokes on their statesmen guests around the social board, and they are like a lot of schoolboys in the freedom of their merry making.

There were some men in a very hard practical joke played on the Gridiron club, and many of the members still feel sore over it. A correspondent of a prominent newspaper was under contract to the club after Frank Hatton had declined a reelection. He presided at all of the banquets. He had a president of the United States at his right hand at a great banquet, as a guest of the club. Then he announced in a newspaper card that the president had been his personal guest. That was the end of the Gridiron club weary. But, later on, after congress had adjourned, and when all the glory of the session was gone, the revolution announced at a meeting of the club that he had experienced a severe attack of acute religion and that he had decided to resign his membership and, of course, resigned the position of president of the club. The Gridiron club was honored him that he would pray for them. The whole affair was so peculiar and so apparently farcical, that it has ever been regarded as a very hard practical joke on the eminent gentlemen of the Gridiron club, and their friends often chaff them about it.

There is a Press club here, but it is not composed exclusively of newspaper men. However, as it is young and growing, it may become so some day. It is composed of those days, and not dependent upon the fees and patronage of outsiders. Many young newspaper men avail themselves of the facilities of the club for office purposes, thereby saving themselves the expense of maintaining offices, for which they would be obliged to pay rent and other incidentals, which would eat into their slender incomes.

Thus it will be seen that there are good and commendable sides to club life in this city, and that some of the features of this phase of existence are worthy of kindly mention and favorable consideration. While the clubs mentioned have been well advertised, another has come into existence, of which the world outside of Washington has heard little, but which has already developed into one of the marked institutions of the capital city. This is the Columbia Athletic club, now members of the club, which has already developed into one of the marked institutions of the capital city. This is the Columbia Athletic club, now members of the club, which has already developed into one of the marked institutions of the capital city.

CLUB LIFE AS IT IS.

victories have been won. It is not entirely creditable to the Athletic club that they have had some boxing matches which might almost properly be called prize fights. Several of these encounters have not only been very fierce, but on two occasions they have been bloody battles. Such scenes are not likely to be repeated.

The Columbia Athletic club maintains a house for the accommodation of its members which is generally conceded by experts in such matters of architecture to be one of the most complete athletic homes in the city, and in some respects surpassed by none. It has been modeled somewhat after the famous New York club, and as far as the gymnasium apparatus is concerned, is complete in every detail. The gymnasium room is said to be finer even than that of the New York club, and the immense swimming pool with glazed sides of tile and Turkish bath accommodations, is an attraction rarely found even in the finest houses. The billiard room, bowling alleys, reception rooms and library are most attractive and contain all the latest modern improvements. The building is an immense structure of brown stone and pressed brick, the interior finished in polished oak and the floor extended 800,000 square feet of the most distinguished men in the country are members of this club, and all of them take pride in their athletic development. None of them run to nunchakany oleomin, and cigarette smoking is not regarded by them as a high art. They are strong men intellectually as well as physically. It is a good club. SMITH D. FRY.

Dead Sea Drying Up.
The Dead Sea today is a little body of sluggish, dark, gray water, gathered at the bottom of the deepest depression on the earth's surface, about 1,300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean. A recent scientific expedition has proven, however, that at one time its surface was a level with the Mediterranean and its area more than twenty times what it is at present. In what the geologists call the "glacial period" the level of the sea at the Dead Sea was more than 1,000 feet in depth.

Makes Doleful Prognostications.
The end of the world is to come on April 29, 1905, according to a German theologian, who has just alarmed Berlin by his prophecy. Among his most forcible forecasts are a great war in 1907, the advent of a new Napoleon in 1900, as king of Greece and Syria, and a terrible plague in 1905.

SIR HENRY PONSONBY.
Queen Victoria's Private Secretary for a Quarter of a Century.
The position of secretary to a royal personage is a singular but a singularly exacting one. Exactitude has been defined as the courtesy of monarchs, and while a business or professional man may now and then leave a letter unanswered for a few days, a king or queen may not. In order to keep up with the immense volume of political and personal correspondence, the sovereign must employ a faithful and confidential person willing to undertake fatigue and arrange. Such a person, says Ponsonby, has been Sir Henry Ponsonby at the court of Queen Victoria for nearly two generations. And now it is not wonderful that, as advancing years warn him to rest, he should have broken down under the stress of duties which his sovereign would not permit him to give up. Stricken with paralysis St. Osborne, Sir Henry will not retire from the court to which he became attached when he was a young officer of the guards, toward 1850. He was then made equerry to the prince consort, and he was so much liked by the prince that the queen's interest in him led to his becoming her private secretary. He accepted, and for twenty-four years has been successful in his vigilance for the queen's interests. Being private secretary means managing the queen's estate and intimate affairs, and taking care of the immense number of boxes of documents, orders and warrants sent wherever the queen may be residing for signature. It means submitting to her the drafts of all papers of importance on foreign affairs before they are launched forth to the various ambassadors. It means occasional conflicts with officials and long and careful correspondence with them. It means working all the afternoon and late into the night, getting rid of the business which the queen has heaped upon her secretary during the morning hours.

Sir Henry has a trained staff of confidential clerks which travels with him, when the queen moves from palace to palace. He has long been the arranger of family quarrels, the writer of letters which settle disputes between royal personages, and often he has to exercise the function of censor. He has also usually had to manage the negotiations with the statesmen who have been charged with the administration of the country, and has shown himself singularly successful in presenting the queen's views to successful premiers without seeming to dictate at all. His small private office in Wellington castle was one of the most important in the kingdom.

GOOD ROADS TALK.

My idea is that when they are free, then Supervisor can work the county convicts on them; the county has to board them anyhow, and has also to pay Supervisor, so there will be nothing out.

I want Supervisor also to think seriously about one thing the people are thinking and talking of, viz: That while negotiations have taken eight of the main roads of the county, the county still the expenses increase every year. And admitting that he is correct when he puts the figures at $15,000, what would it be if we had these eight to keep up at the same ratio.

In conclusion I beg Supervisor not to fret over the idea that the Turnpike companies are waiting to unload.

I am 67, only man so foolish. J.

DEATHS.

CLARK.—Mr. John H. Clark died at his home on the Palmyra pike, four miles south of the city Tuesday afternoon, after an illness of only a week. Mr. Clark had just returned from a visit to friends in Louisville when he was suddenly stricken down with pneumonia which caused his death a week later. He was about sixty years old and was a prosperous and influential farmer and a man liked by all who knew him. The remains were interred Wednesday at the family burying ground.

During one week of January last, 103,000 tons of steel rails passed the structural material was ordered from the various rolling mills of Pennsylvania.

FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

The free and unlimited coinage of silver, the product of American mines, at the old ratio of 16 of silver to 1 of gold, is the only solution of and remedy for the disturbed and unsatisfactory condition of trade, manufacture and general business of the country. The surreptitious act of 1873, divorcing silver and gold in our monetary system, was a crime of untold magnitude. It was the rankest kind of class legislation in favor of the wealthy against the producers of wealth, and hostile to the prosperity of the United States. It was an act of treason because done at the instance of a European syndicate and for bribe money, "giving aid and comfort to our country's enemies." To shield the guilty parties, the well authenticated facts, often published, have been vigorously denied.

The Enquirer will continue to expose this unpardonable crime until right and justice are done the people by the full restoration of silver to its old companionship with gold. We need the assistance of the people in disseminating the truth, to which end we invite all in your selection of papers for the coming season to include the Enquirer, that costs only $1.00 a year. ## NATIONAL FINANCES.

Republican Comment Upon the Census That Test to Our Present Financial Condition—What a Single Gold Standard Has Brought About.

Senator Allison, of Iowa, was interviewed at Chicago recently regarding the condition of the national finances. Considering his long service in the senate and his connection with financial and monetary questions and measures his statements and opinions at this juncture become unusually interesting. The national finances, as Allison says, are in a very deplorable condition. The revenues fall far short of meeting the expenses of the government. Allison puts the deficit for the past year at $101,000,000, and says it is increasing at the rate of $5,000,000 a month. One thing is certain, he says, and that is that congress must devise some new revenue or else there must be another loan. The last loan instead of serving to replenish the reserve, is required to defray the ordinary expenses of the government.

Speaking of the cause of the falling off of the revenues, Senator Allison says that it is somewhat obscure. While many people lay it to the Wilson tariff, it actually antedates the new tariff law. It is the product, in part, of hard times, for our people are living economically and do not require so many imports as they did.

Unquestionably this is true as far as it goes. Doubtless there was a large reduction in the customs receipts, resulting from the long uncertainty over tariff legislation, but the main cause of the falling off in the receipts has been the economical and industrial depression, which has not been peculiar to the United States. The democrats in power, from President Cleveland down, have been incapable of understanding the situation or of meeting the difficulty. Instead of adjusting the tariff and internal revenue laws, so as to provide sufficient revenue to meet the necessary expenditures of the government economically administered, they have been content to drift along blindly, leaving to Mr. Carlisle the duty of making up the inevitable deficit of from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000 a month out of the necessities of the disgraceful deal with Wall street.

On the other hand, it must be said that Senator Allison and many of his republican associates in congress seem to be unwilling to take more than a skin-deep view of the financial and monetary complications. Allison was a reduction in the customs receipts. He claims to be a bimetalist. He is certainly a man of broad views and of large experience. He and his associates know, therefore, or should know, that the depression now felt in this country, to which he refers, is universal, and that it has been caused by the monetary difficulties resulting from the attempt to force the world to the gold standard.

Nothing is to be expected from the democratic party, but something is expected of the republicans. The question is will they meet the expectations of the country. Certainly they will fail to do so unless they have the courage to restore the finances of the nation to a sound basis; unless they recede from their big game of gold and silver, or their equivalent, the safe foundation of a national currency.—San Francisco Chronicle.

SILVER AND GOLD.

The Justice That a Gold Standard Works to Countries That Are Not on a Gold Basis.

It has long been known to close observers, that the rise in the relative value of money in gold standard countries directly and powerfully tends to discourage the exportation of merchandise from such countries to silver countries. This is the result of the operation of the same powerful law, which stimulates exportation from silver countries to gold countries. And the reason for this is very simple. Thus, when the United States, for example, exports say $1,000 worth of the products of this country to Mexico, it takes at the present time about two thousand Mexican silver dollars to pay for them, besides freights, commissions, etc. That is, they must be sold for silver dollars in that country, which are now worth only one-half as much as gold dollars; and unless the exporter gets at least twice as many of them as his goods are worth in gold in this country, in addition to freight and charges, the transaction when completed will net a loss instead of a profit.

Merchants, manufacturers and farmers cannot sell goods produced on a basis of hard gold valuations to people who have only inferior cheap silver to pay for them, unless they receive very much higher prices than those which prevail in gold countries.

So, on the other hand, the people of silver countries are not likely to buy goods beyond their absolute necessities, from gold countries, if they have to pay for them at the rate of two dollars for one, as the people of Mexico are now obliged to do for everything they import from the United States, or for that matter, from any gold standard country.

In other words, the difference in currencies operates practically as a high protective tariff in all silver countries against all gold countries. Thus we see that England has lost much of her trade, in certain lines, with India; and since England has begun to be devoured the currency of India by closing the mints to the coinage of rupees, India is losing her export trade to China and other far eastern silver countries, because the latter have to pay a constantly increasing premium on rupees for all the goods they buy in India.

STRIKES AND STRIKERS.

Alex Sweet Accuses Jacob of Some Queer Doings.

Indirectly the Patriarch May Have Been Responsible for the Brooklyn Strike and Riots—How to Prevent Trouble in the Future.

(Special New York Letter.)
The strike is not a modern invention. It has existed in some shape or other since the beginning of time, and it is caused by poverty and we have the very highest authority for the belief that the poor will always be with us. Leaving out the case of Abel, the first strike on record is that of Jacob against his employer and father-in-law Laban, who was the owner of a stock ranch in the early days. Jacob's grievance is briefly, but succinctly, set forth in the thirty-first chapter of Genesis. It reads:

THE MOTORS SEE THE POINT.

"Thus have I been for twenty years in thy house; I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle, and thou hast changed my wages ten times. Then Jacob struck his duplex father-in-law for higher wages, and not getting them, went out. This was one of the few strikes that was a success, for Jacob went into business on his own account, and prospered. It will be noticed, however, that had it not been for a bad dream that Laban had he would have brought Jacob to terms. In this, the first of all recorded strikes, the Almighty sided with the oppressed."

Another notable strike was that of the Israelites against the exactions of Pharaoh, and of the infuriated heart. Moses was the organizer of this strike. When Pharaoh called out his militia, to bring the strikers to terms, they came to grief in a miraculous manner in the Red sea. However, it is only fair to call attention to the fact that Pharaoh's version of the trouble has never been published. There may have been some mitigating circumstances, for the subsequent conduct of the children of Israel, in putting to the sword those with whom they did not agree, justifies the suspicion that they, though not entirely devoid of justice, were not entirely devoid of blood. Incidentally, it may be also mentioned that before leaving Egypt Moses struck an Egyptian so hard that he never rallied from the effect of the blow.

I never see that Egyptian obelisk in Central park without thinking about the row between Moses and Pharaoh, for it was one of the obelisks in front of the temple of On, at which institution Moses was a student. There it was that he acquired much of that wisdom for which he was justly celebrated. Strange, isn't it, that there should be in New York an obelisk at which the great law-giver must have gazed every day? But I am digressing.

A strike very much to be commended was that of the ancient Greeks, who, following the advice of their leader, Marco Bozaris, struck their altars and their fires.

Strikes are very uncertain as to the ultimate result. They are like runaway horses—more easily prevented than stopped. And, like runaway horses, those engaged in them do not realize when they start out that they themselves may be fished out of the wreck at the finish.

It even happens that the capitalists utilize strikes for their own benefit. It

GREAT DEMAND FOR EXTRAS.

One of the greatest obstacles to the success of strikes in large cities is to be found in the fact that, as soon as a strike has been started, the ranks of the strikers are swelled by large numbers from the very toughest elements of society, men who never do honest work under any circumstances whatever. It was a man of this type that a soft-minded friend of mine in Brooklyn gave an order for a dinner. The bill came in for nine beers and a cigar. The strikers in Brooklyn were also reinforced by foreign anarchists, men who came to this country in quest of freedom—from the future, as in the past, his objectionable element will exert an influence for evil in every strike that takes place in a large city. Much more trouble is caused by men who can get work, but won't work, than by those who want to work. Of course, employers, particularly when they are large corporations, are always violently opposed to labor demonstrations of any kind. In fact, the baseball player is the only one whose right to strike is not only acknowledged but approved by those for whom he works.

The only persons who seem to profit by riots and strikes are the newsmen who sell extras. They aroused curiosity at all hours during the Brooklyn riots by shouting: "Here's yer extra. Splendid and death! Great excitement!" It is not unlikely that more people died from pneumonia contracted by going out into the streets at night, thinly clad, to secure the latest news, than were actually killed in the street fights.

There are, moreover, strikers who are not any too fond of steady work. There is a well authenticated case of a Brooklyn striker saying to his wife: "More labor troubles, when will the poor laboring man in this land have peace and his honest rights?" "What's the matter now?" asked his wife, "nothing worse, I hope." Yes, indeed, there is! I heard a rumor that the trawler boats were going to give in and then I'd have to go to work again."

No public speaker, no matter how democratic his audience or unpopular his theme, ever went through the ordeal to which the newsmen on the Brooklyn trawler car, and his guardian angel, a policeman with a large club with warts on it, are still subjected, occasionally, although the strike is supposed to be over. While the strike was at its height rows and fights were of such common occurrence that if at any time there was no rioting going on large crowds gathered from curiosity to see what was the matter. However, the new employees became so accustomed to harsh treatment that they were grateful when no more dangerous missiles than eggs of last year's vintage, back-number cards and like aromatic testimonials were wafted at them. Numerous motormen and policemen underwent the experience of that orator at the meeting on the St. Stanislaus, poetically described by Bert Harris. He was hit by a large geological specimen, and then "He curled up on the floor. And the subsequent proceedings interested him no more."

The strikers and many other citizens of Brooklyn entertained a feeling of contempt for the militia until they demonstrated their effectiveness. A private of the Seventy-first regiment, who was returning to New York on a few hours' leave of absence, was standing on the platform of an elevated station when he was approached by an aged Hibernian, who had overestimated himself. The latter expressed his candid opinion that with "an old blackthorn" he could make mince meat of a militiaman with his gun and bayonet.

"Where would you hit me?" asked the soldier, good naturedly.

"On the top of yer head, me dad!" "Well, stand back and I'll show you what I'd do," replied the soldier, making the old man parry and lunging forward with his bayonet. "There's what I'd do, and you and your old blackthorn would be buried in the same coffin."

"If you ever see the loker?" ejaculated the Irishman, satisfied that a net and bayonet are not to be trifled with when in the hands of a man who knows what to do with them.

The great question of the day is: "What shall be done to prevent strikes?" They are going to occur in the future as they have in the past, involving untold misery and hardship to the strikers and the community.

The socialists have a remedy, but it is only popular with those who have no property. It is impracticable for various reasons. They propose to have a general division of property. That might do for a short time, but it would not be very long before the men were not addicted to state beer and a sedentary life would acquire the property of others. That would involve another "divide," and would ultimately become monotonous, and create bad feeling. There is another serious objection to the general division plan. According to the socialist theory all property is robbery, hence, as the receiver is worse than the thief, any socialist who takes any of the property of a receiver of stolen goods. It would not be right to thus place temptation in the path of the socialist. He might forget to say: "Let the thief be hanged by the neck, and property in a common fund and each one can take out according to his needs. This, of course, involves the early cooperation of the capitalist, and I regret to say that, as far as New York is concerned, there is no indication of the participation of the Asters and Vanderbilts, hence it would not be fashionable with most of the society people."

ALEX R. SWEET.

ABOUT EUROPEAN CITIES.

BERLIN has no slums. Even in the poorest quarters the houses are paved with asphalt and are kept faultlessly clean.

At Chester, England, the recorder has received for the fourth time in five years a pair of white gloves in token of there being no criminal cases on the calendar.

Manchester is not to be left behind by Boston. More money has been subscribed than was asked for to build the canal that will connect the town with the sea at Bock, on the Irish coast. The famous house at Elisenberg, Germany, where Luther was born has been repaired and restored and newly opened to the public a few weeks ago as a kind of museum of relics of the great reformer.

Elberf, the center of the French woolen cloth manufacture, is so well off that it has abolished nearly all its town taxes, and now petitions the government for leave to do away with the octroi, the duty on provisions entering the town.

Great progress has been made in railroad building in Switzerland within four years. Ten mountains have railways to the top, the Brinzen-Rothorn, 7,388 feet, being the highest. An interior railway, tunneled up to the top of the Jungfrau, is now proposed.

GOITRE IN THE NECK.

The Electropose has cured what was supposed to be goitre on the neck of Mrs. Low Thompson of Montgomery, Ky. The enlargement began to diminish soon after treatment of the Electropose was applied; at this time it does not show at all.

Large quantities of mucus was thrown out and sometimes corruption an inch long and as large as my little finger. Others of my friends have the Electropose and the one in my family has proved its curative powers on more than one occasion.

W. H. Rector,

Cadiz, Ky. Nov. 1, 1894.

Dear Sir:—I write to inform you that I am more than satisfied with the investment I made with the Electropose. I am now a well woman where I was a perfect wreck from the effects of asthma. I commenced treatment last July.

Mrs. W. H. Rector,

Cadiz, Ky. May 14, 1894.

Mrs. Rector, under date of August 3d, says: "My health continues good; I have no return of asthma and am in better health than I have ever been in my life; have gained in weight over 15 pounds. A neighbor of mine is using it for goitre, and it has very much reduced the largeness of her goitre; think she will be entirely cured." Electropose put out on trial for four months for $10. ## A Big Show Coming.

As will be seen by advertising columns the great yankee drama of "Si Plunkard" is to be presented at the Opera House Wednesday eve, March 13. This is one of the most laughable plays ever put upon the stage, but at the same time it has an interesting plot. It is presented by an excellent company, with the famous Yankee comedian, J. C. Lewis, in the title role. The orchestra is a large and very fine one, and in fact everything connected with the show is first class. The prices of admission are low, so that there should be a packed house on the occasion. The press of this and other States speak in the highest terms of the show.
